HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. R. said, that he would examine into some of the statements, made respecting the application of the sum appropriated by the act of last session, to the reduction of the debt. And here he could not but remark the coincidence of the unaccounted balance of 114,000 some hundred dollars, stated by the gentleman, with the representations contained in a printed circular letter (of which he obtained a casual sight yesterday) addressed by a gentleman from North Carolina to his constituents; although the writer of the letter did, and the gentleman from Connecticut did not give credit for the proceeds of the sale of the bank shares. [Here Mr. Griswold said that he was misunderstood; that in making out the balance of 114,000 dollars, he had given credit for the bank stock.] Mr. R. proceeded. He said that the gentlemen then agreed, as indeed he supposed at first they would, not only in the result, but in all the intermediate steps which led to it. Whether the gentleman from Connecticut had availed himself of the labors of his friend, or had lent his assistance to them, he could not undertake to determine, but from the tenor of that letter, and of the objections which had just been offered, it was evident that the same matter had prompted both. It was nevertheless contended that the proceeds of the bank shares could not be estimated as a part of the appropriation of seven millions 300,000 dollars to the public debt. Mr. R. said that the report of the commissioners of the sinking fund did not indeed include these proceeds in that sum, because the commissioners construed the law so as to have the utmost efficiency to give appropriation, and to pay, of course,

But the gentleman from Connecticut has said that no credit should be given for the year 1802, for any payments made in the year 1803. He would strike out therefore the 3,600,000 guilders, from which credit is taken first; according to him, credit may be as well taken for monies to be paid six years hence as during the next year—and yet he gives credit for the reimbursement of the 8 per cent and deferred stock payable on the 1st Jan. 1803. Let not the house ascribe this to the generosity of the gentleman—he knew that if credit was not given for the 8th and 2d installments of those stocks payable on the 1st of Jan. 1803, credit must be taken for the payment of the 7th and 1st installments of those stocks respectively and the 1st instalment of the subscription loan due the bank paid the 1st Jan. 1802, amounting to 160,000 dolls. more than the sum which he has admitted. He knew that one or the other of those payments must be credited, and he has taken the smallest, although upon his own principle, being payable in 1803, it ought not to be admitted in advance. An objection is however

Remainder ;

With respect to the one hundred and fourteen thousand and some hundred dollars said to be unaccounted for, this must be 'the sundry protested bills and of unexpended balances in the hands of agents,' specified in the report. So far from finding cause of surprise and suspicion at such an unaccounted balance, he was astonished that including protested bills and advances to agents, yet to be recovered or accounted for, so small a sum should appear unaccounted for, on the payment of nine million three hundred thousand dollars, the sum disbursed, inclusive of the bank stock. The purchasers of bills for government are the cashiers of the several banks. Some

When this government went into operation, many great offices were to be bestowed. Ambition here was on fire. The venerable man who then presided filled the offices, with singular wisdom, but all could not be gratified. Six judges of the supreme court were appointed—How many McKean's tho't themselves worthy candidates for these places? Secretaries were appointed—How many chancellors? Legislators desired to that dignity?

The war in Europe, which commenced in the French revolution, tended to the opposition of which I speak. France, at this period, beset of new doctrines, on almost every subject. All the maxims in politics and religion, which had been established by the wisdom of ages, were exploded. The fascinating theory of restraints upon the passions, and government itself were cursed, was rejected. It was proclaimed that a new era had begun, and the people of the world were kindly invited to assist France to establish a millennium, and to share with them in its joys. Self government alone was enjoined, and weak men were assured that they were to be perfect and Godlike. It was the same system to consider Government as in hostility with the rest of the world, and that it was the duty of nations to espouse the cause of France in this common enemy. Genet, one of many of our countrymen, was caught in this net of destruction for us, but to his aid the consideration, that he was our revolution, his nation's aid. There was an ample field opened for the operation of ambition, not that ambition which strives to excel in doing good—but an ambition fierce and cruel—impatient opposition—an ambition which is now thorizing to destroy the reputation of Federalists in Connecticut—a which, since the infamy, has been unceasingly inflicting calumny on man—which has gibbeted the fair fame of Washington, and which has lately turned Europe into one great slaughter house of human victims.

The funding system was a measure violently opposed to the feelings of the members of Congress from the South.
That the debt against the United States, was incurred for the general defence, and therefore a fair debt against the union, yet it was principally owned in Pennsylvania and the states to the northward of her. It was not pleasing to those who did not own it to contribute for its payment. Patriotism yielded to selfishness in this instance, as it has sometimes done in others.

The provisions of the national government were calculated to foster commerce, and particularly to augment American shipping. The extra duties, wisely laid on foreign bottoms, and on goods imported in them, among other measures, contributed greatly to this end. It was foreseen that, without such duties, the ships of other nations, would come to our ports and transport our produce to foreign markets. These duties operated to prevent this measure and to increase ship building; this, to the northern states, was an object of great importance. The southern states saw, in this and other regulations, the increasing wealth of New-England.
This was no consolation to them. Hence the present congress is attempting to repeal those duties. The undeniable consequence of a repeal will be, that other nations will immediately commence carriers for us; this will diminish essentially the wealth of New England, and this being well understood by our merchants, there is but one opinion among them on the subject.

It is surprising that a Connecticut man should have any doubts on this question, yet we find Abraham Bishop, who turnishes many creeds for his party, though not one of them has any confidence in his integrity, published a treatise, strongly urging that our ships should be destroyed, and other nations become our carriers.
Such a treatise, one would apprehend, would be as little relished among the N.
England merchants and ship builders, as a treatise in favor of repealing the tax on distilleries; both are well adapted for the climate of Virginia, where they build few ships, but manufacture much whiskey. In N. England it is yet deemed more advantageous to morals and health, and more conducive to prosperity, to be celebrated for the number of our ships, than the number of our distilleries.

The war in Europe, which originated in the French revolution, tended to augment the opposition of which I am speaking. France, at this period, broached a set of new doctrines, on almost every subject. All the maxims in politics, morals and religion, which had been sanctioned by the wisdom of ages, were openly exploded. The fascinating theory, that all restraints upon the passions, and that government itself were curses, was advocated. It was proclaimed that a new era had begun, and the people of the U. States were kindly invited to assist Frenchmen to establish a millennium, and participate with them in its joys. Self government alone was enjoined, and weak and wicked men were assured, that they were soon to be perfect and Godlike. It was a part of the same system to consider Great Britain as in hostility with the rest of the world, and that it was the duty of all nations to espouse the cause of France against this common enemy. Genet, aided by many of our countrymen, was spreading this net of destruction for us, by calling to his aid the consideration, that during our revolution, his nation assisted us.
Every engine was employed to excite the passions of Americans to enter into this dreadful controversy. About this period the famous resolutions of Mr. Madison, which were always considered as the production in reality of Mr. Jefferson, were submitted to Congress. The obvious tendency of these was to draw closer the bands between us and France, and to indirectly attack Great Britain.

Washington and his council, saw, in this enchain-French theory, nothing but mischief. He saw that, under the specious garb of attempting to ameliorate the condition of man, a wild and intemperate attack was made, on the peace, order and happiness of the world. Instead therefore of listening to the voice which endeavored to allure the United States into that terrible vortex of politics, he resisted every attempt to produce a partiality for either of the contending parties, and established, with the strictest good faith, an upright and dignified neutrality. Here he incurred the keen reprobation of French philosophers and their disciples. Hence we find that during the first four years of his presidency, war was proclaimed against him and his measures, in a newspaper, printed by one Freneau, who was then secretary to Mr.

Jefferson."

Alexandria Advertiser.
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 6.

Monday last, being Prince William court day, the votes of that county were taken for a representative in Congress, for the District composed of the counties of Prince William, Loudoun and Fairfax—The candidates were

Democrat.	Republican.
Richard Brent, 194	Joseph Lewis, 56.

We congratulate the friends of true republicanism on the great decrease of Democracy in that county, on every former election, for some years past, the Democratic Candidate has had a majority of very near two hundred. On Monday next the votes will be taken in Loudoun county, when we confidently hope the cause of Republicanism will have to boast a majority of from two to three hundred, which will ensure Mr. Lewis' election, as the county of Fairfax (if we may judge from hearsay) will be equally divided.

Mr. Snowden—The lurking manner in which "A Subscriber" addressed the citizens, in the Advertiser of Monday last, reminds me of some adventures (not inap-plicable) in my continental services for the rights of man, when we had to hunt the coaches from their hiding places—Now, should the Subscriber wish to avoid a proper contempt for his baseness, let him lie close, and wound, though with falsehood, in the dark, until he is detected by the light of truth.

JOHN LONGDEN.
April 5.

The following interesting account of a most barbarous and atrocious robbery has been communicated to us by a respectable correspondent at Williamsport, Pennsylv-vania.

The unhappy sufferer is a young lady, about eighteen years of age, by the name of Esther M'Dowell. The history of her misfortunes is thus related by our correspondent.

Miss M'Dowell is the daughter & only child of Dr. John M'Dowell, who, about three years since, removed from Montreal to Kentucky, where he had purchased an estate. He left this daughter to reside with an aged aunt who has since died and left her niece heir to a considerable property. Upon the death of her aunt, the young lady expressed to her father a wish to remove and reside with her parents in Kentucky. Accordingly he sent a man, who had been brought up from infancy in his family, and in whose fidelity and honor he had the most implicit confidence, to conduct her home. She proceeded with him from Montreal, and arrived in the neighbourhood of Williamsport on Monday evening, the 21st March instant. During the day, the villain had taken pains to avoid observation as much as possible by leaving the public road and passing thro' obscure and unfrequented paths. They continued to travel till about ten o'clock in the evening, when he suddenly dismounted, dragged the lady from her horse, and presented a pistol to her breast, demanding money, and threatened to murder her if she attempted to give an alarm. She implored his mercy, offering him all she possessed upon the condition of sparing her life. At that instant he tore off her bonnet, and gagged her mouth to prevent her from speaking. He then proceeded to strip her of every article of clothing, & tying her hands behind her, made her fast to a tree while he packed up her apparel in the fud-dle bags. Having done this, he removed her to a more distant part of the woods, & tying her fast to a tree in a close thicket, made off with the horses and all the property that she had with her.

In this deplorable situation she remained entirely naked, exposed to the severe cold of the night until about break of day, when by her struggles, she loosened herself from the tree, and with much difficulty made her way through the woods to a house about eighty rods distant, where she was kindly received, and supplied with such things as were immediately necessary. It was not until after a considerable time that she was able to speak and relate the particulars of the disaster.

She is now, as our correspondent informs, at the house of the Rev. Isaac Grier, who lives near the place where the inhuman crime was perpetrated. Though nearly a hundred persons have been engaged in pursuit of the villain we are forty to say that no certain intelligence has been obtained. A description of the perpetrator, and of the property lost will be found in the following advertisement.

He is about 22 years of age; of a middle size, swarthy complexion; has long black hair, tied with a ribbon: has a remarkable large mole above his left eye brow, which he takes pains to conceal by suffering his hair to grow long upon his et, light coloured cassimere pantaloons; took with him two horses, one of which is grey, the other black, and about four years old; a woman's saddle new, with a piece of bear-skin fastened to the seat; and two portmanteaus or saddlebags, in one of which were upwards of one thou-

Virginia, so named, in honor of Elizabeth the Virgin Queen of England was the eldest sister among the British American colonies; and she has never been feru-pulous in claiming, from her younger sisters, the full amount of respect and homage, that belongs to her seniority. The first effective settlement of this "Ancient Dominion," as Virginia has been called, was in the year 1609; thirteen years before the settlement of Plymouth in N.
England. The emigrants came over to Virginia, not by pairs, as the creatures went into the Ark, but without wives and families; and were mere adventurers in quest of wealth, who determined as soon as their fortunes should be made, to return to England. As this determination, carried into effect, might have been fatal to the colony, Sir Edwin Sandys in order to attach the colonists to the soil, and prevent their return, advised the proprietors in England to send them over a cargo of young women and to exchange these necessities of life for tobacco. This prudent advice was followed; and accordingly in the year 1620, ninety girls were sent to the Virginia planters at one time.
A freight of sixty more was sent the next year. A species of commerce so highly advantageous was not declined by the planters. The love of women in this instance, completely triumphed over fordid avarice, inasmuch that files of gallant Virginians were to be seen, carrying down to the ship with a hasty step, their bundles of tobacco, and after making the exchange, conducting home their dear spouses. At first the value of a wife was estimated at one hundred and twenty pounds of tobacco; but as the sale of this precious commodity was rapid, the price soon rose to an hundred and fifty pounds. Indeed it reflects no small degree of honour upon the generosity of the gallantry of the planter that they should voluntarily give such prices for their wives, especially when it is considered that King James of England, who was so bitter an enemy to smoking, that with his own royal hand he wrote, a book against it, and prohibited the Virginians from raising tobacco beyond the annual quantity of one hundred pounds each. Under these circumstances, the purchase of a wife must have cost a planter fifty per cent more than his whole tobacco crop, for a single year.

It would seem that some of the planters were under the necessity of purchasing their wives on credit; and in order to prevent evasions of payment, which otherwise might likely have happened, especially if they found themselves cheated in their bargains, the general assembly enacted, that "the price of a wife should have the precedence of all other debts, in recovery and payment, because (says the assembly) of all kinds of merchandise, this was the most desirable." In fact, though bona fide debts have not always been recoverable by law in Virginia; yet, in this instance of "the most desirable kind of merchandise," the legislature, much to its honor, solemnly ordained that, in case of the purchase of a wife on credit, the purchaser should pay the tobacco, even to the last ounce, that he had contracted to give for her.

The memory of such a remarkable piece of history as I have been relating, ought, I think, to be perpetuated by some public monument. As wool is the staple of Britain and the prime source of its wealth, it has been a custom, time out of mind, for the first Lord of the Treasury to sit upon a wool sack; and with equal, if not greater propriety, might not the Speaker of the Virginia Assembly be seated upon a sack of tobacco; seeing this odiferous plant has not only been the staple of commerce in the ancient dominion. But also the basis of population.

(Balance.)

Our Belles, like the Hottentot Fashionables, adopt great simplicity, in their dress: Put off the bear skin and the bare skin remains! Thus every beauty is a Bell Savage!

It is a curious fact, in regard to the cure of the plague, that a French soldier of artillery, being d d licious under the infection, in Egypt, threw himself into the Nile; in which, without drowning, he remained full half an hour before he could be taken out; and that, in consequence of the immersion, he soon recovered entirely from the disease.

A French soldier being mortally wounded in Egypt, the surgeon desired to tell him he could not possibly recover. "Where is the danger Sir," said the man; "Because," replied the surgeon, "the brain is injured." "Then you are a fool, and know nothing about it," returned the soldier, with a characteristic facetiousness unusual in a person having but a few hours to live; "for if I had ever had any brains, I should not have come here!"

A New and Practical Work.

A PROPOSAL,
By William Y. Birch, & Abraham Small,
of the City of Philadelphia,
FOR PUBLISHING IN VOLUMES, BY SUBSCRIPTION,

THAT USEFUL AND POPULAR WORK, THE
Domestic Encyclopædia,
OR, A
DICTIONARY OF FACTS, AND
USEFUL KNOWLEDGE:

COMPREHENDING
A concise view of the latest discoveries, inventions, and improvements, chiefly applicable to rural and domestic economy.

TOGETHER WITH
Descriptions of the most interesting objects of nature and art; the history of men and animals, in a state of health or disease; and practical hints respecting the arts and manufactures, both familiar and commercial.

Illustrated with numerous Engravings and Cuts.

By A. F. M. WILLICH, A. M.
Author of the Lectures on Diet and Regimen, &c. &c.

FIRST AMERICAN EDITION, With additions, applicable to the present situation of the U. States,

By JAMES MEASE, M. D.
Fellow of the American Philosophical Society,

And Corresponding Member of the Literary and Phil. Soc. at Manchester.

From the above general contents of the work, it will be easily conceived that the nature of the Domestic Encyclopædia is peculiarly adapted to the present wants of the United States. Perhaps it contains a greater number of useful facts than have ever appeared in the compass of four moderate volumes. No man, trouble, or expence appear to have been spared to render this economical dictionary as complete as the present advancement of agriculture, gardening, of the family arts and manufactures, as well as the imperfect state of medical science, would respectively admit. It includes almost every object more or less connected with rural, domestic, and animal economy.

Hence the reader will find numerous experiments related, many hundred of which have not before been published in the English language.

With regard to the additions, the editor will observe, that no exertions shall be wanting on his part, to render them as accurate as possible to the people of this country. The diseases common to prevalent there, with the most approved methods of prevention and cure, shall be particularly detailed. An account shall be given of all the discoveries which have been made in the United States; and many Machines for diminishing labour, which are peculiar thereto, shall be described, and illustrated in Plates. In short, every useful fact in rural and domestic economy, omitted by Dr. Willich, and which may be known to the editor, shall be inserted; and in order to take advantage of progressing improvements, arrangements have been made to have all the periodical works on the above subjects, forwarded as soon as published in England or France.

The Publishers have but little to add for themselves; knowing, that professions generally are, and perhaps, ought to be, in a great measure, unavailing, they refer the Public to the books they have already published. They have given to the world two editions of Dr. Russell's Modern Europe, within the last three years; the manner, therefore, in which they execute their undertakings, can be ascertained. In the present work, if they do not advance much, they pledge themselves not to degenerate. It shall be printed in the best style of uniformity and taste. The Paper shall be superfine; and the Engravings at least equal to those in the London copy.

Conditions.

I. It shall be printed in five handsome octavo volumes. One volume shall be delivered every three months. Price to subscribers, two dollars and fifty cents per volume, in boards, payable on delivery.

II. The first volume shall appear on the first of April, 1803, and a volume regularly every three months afterwards.

III. It may be had in one delivery when finished, at twelve dollars and fifty cents, in boards, or fifteen dollars well bound, payable on the delivery of the books. It will, however, be only obtained at these prices, by those who give the publishers their names during the process of the work to take it when finished.

N. B. The public will please to take notice, that the amount in price of this improved and extended work, is not higher than the London work in four volumes.

Subscriptions to the above work will be received by Samuel Bishop and by James Kennedy, sen. Alexandria.
